Cool tie dye patterns for hoodies

1 Place a plastic tablecloth over a large table to prevent stains and spills. The tie dyeing process can be very messy, so it is best to put a plastic tablecloth over a large table to reduce spills and prevent the dyes from coloring your furniture. [1] Pin or clamp it down so it doesn't shift while working with the hoodie. Consider dyeing your hoodie in the garage or on a fold-out table in the yard so you don't accidentally color something important in the house. 2 Mix dye fixer with water in a large bucket to make the dye stick. Dye has a habit to fade over time, so mix 3 x 4 c (180 ml) dye fixer per 1 US gal (3.8 l) water in a bucket. For a natural dye fixer, use soda, but if you don't mind using chemicals, opt for sodium carbonate. [2] You can buy dye fixers in craft stores. Wear rubber gloves throughout the tie dye process to prevent irritation from various components and dyes. Use a large bucket or bowl instead of a small one to dye a hoodie, as unlike a T-shirt or small garment, a hoodie takes up a lot of space. If you get one of the solutions in your eyes, rinse it with water. If it feels particularly painful, contact your poison control hotline. 3 Wash and wrestle your white cotton hoodie to get rid of oils and dirt. Place your white hoodie in the washing machine itself on a spin cycle, then either put it in the dryer or wring it by hand if you don't want to wait too long to move on. This allows the hoodie to absorb as much dye as possible, and it will get rid of oils that can affect the tie dye design. [3] A white cotton hoodie is best, as the patterns and dyes show much more clearly. Feel free to use a colored hoodie, but stay away from dark colors and consider how the base color of the hoodie will mix with your chosen dyes. 4 Soak the hoodie in the dye fixer solution for 5 to 10 minutes. Place the hoodie in the mixture of dye fixer and water and leave to soak for about 5 to 10 minutes, or until fully saturated. Tear out the shirt and place it flat on the plastic tablecloth. You can reuse the same solution for additional things you want to color! [4] 5 Prepare a 3 US gal (11 L) bucket with warm water and add dye. Make the water about as hot as you would use for a baby bath – about 32-37°C. Mix in about 2 to 4 tsp (5 to 10 g) of your chosen Procion dye and mix it with a metal spoon until the dye is completely dissolved. [5] If you want to add multiple colors to the hoodie, prepare additional buckets of warm water and dye to keep the colors separate. Add more dye powder to create stronger shades, or less dye powder for muted colors. 1 Create a monochrome swirl by twisting the center of the hoodie. With your hoodie placed flat on the plastic tablecloth, grab the center of the hoodie between the armpits and turn in one direction until the hoodie is crammed together. Tie 5 or 6 rubber bands around the outside of the hoodie to keep the vertebra intact. Soaking in in Dye solution bucket for about 30 minutes to 1 hour. [6] The wrinkles in the swirling hoodie will not soak nearly as much dye as the exposed areas, creating a white swirl in the middle of the hoodie that rotates outwards! 2 Make a bullseye pattern by pinching the center of the hoodie with rubber bands. Pinch the center of your hoodie, grab both the front and back in the same movement, and lift the fabric up about 1 in (2.5 cm). Secure a rubber band firmly around the ascent, then hold rubber bands down at a distance of 2.5 cm until the entire hoodie is wrapped in a cylindrical shape. Then soak the hoodie for 30 minutes to 1 hour. [7] Do not pull fabric through the rubber band areas, but pull up the top of the cylinder to bring the rest of the hoodie and apply rubber bands as you walk. They will end up with a middle circle with larger circles around it, like a target! 3 Create a colorful diagonal stripe by folding accordion style. From a lower corner of your hoodie, fold in the direction of the opposite shoulder about 2 in (5.1 cm). Then turn the hoodie over and fold it again 5.1 cm. [8] Continue turning the hoodie and fold the corner until it is only a 5.1 cm rectangle, and attach rubber bands every 2.5 cm to hold them together. To achieve dual coloration, soak half of the rubber band hoodie in a dye bucket for 30 minutes, then soak the other half in a different color for 30 minutes. Your hoodie will come out with two diagonal color halves with white, parallel lines, all 5.1 cm distributed! 4 Create a sunburst pattern by pinching the hoodie and using liquid dye. Pinch the fabric of the hoodie, grab both the front and the back in one motion and secure the clamped area with tight rubber bands. Do this in different places until you are satisfied with the number of sun bursts. Apply liquid Procion dye to the unclamped parts of the hoodie first, then press just a few drops on each rubber band area. [9] It is super easy to use multiple colors for Sunburst patterns. Change the color of the fabric and the sun eruptions by dripping a complementary color of the dye into the pinched area! You don't need to use the dye bucket for this pattern, but if you don't have a liquid procion dye, it will do the job well – although it won't come out as saturated in color. Soak in the dye ingele for 30 minutes to 1 hour. 1 The hoodie should be wrapped in rubber bands for up to 2 hours. If you soak the hoodie in dye, do not remove the rubber bands and leave it 2 sit on a plastic tablecloth or outside. This allows the dyes to put deep into the fabric of the hoodie, and also makes it easier to wash out excess dye later without affecting the color too much. If you want the colors to saturate even more, leave the hoodie overnight. Consider wrapping the hoodie in plastic wrap while it sits to prevent spills and stains as the dye sets and liquid liquid 2 Remove the rubber bands and wash the hoodie until the water is running clean. In a large sink or in the bathtub, run the hoodie under cold water until no dye comes through. This throws away excess dye and the cold water deepens the saturation of the dye that has prevailed. [11] It may be beneficial to start with slightly warm water and gradually turn it to ice cold, as it initially wars away more dye, but this can also cause the dye to bleed when the water is too hot. 3 Wash and dry the hoodie in the washing machine. After washing with cool water, place the hoodie in the washing machine itself to use with normal detergent. [12] It can take several washers, but after it comes out free of bleeding dye, stick it into the dryer, and enjoy your new tie dyed hoodie! Do not use a particularly powerful or special-specific detergent as it could cause the dye to bleed when not fully set. Opt for regular, run-of-the-mill washing soap to carry it clean and ready!
